The first thing to do, I think, is tell about my qualifications ... or lack of them ... in this field. I do not work, nor have I ever worked in the motion picture or television industry. And, it's not my aim to teach you how to make film of the length or quality of what you see on your television screen.

Video cameras within the reach of the majority of pockets will not normally achieve the sharpness and quality of what you see on television. But, with the growing ability to watch video footage on a home computer, usually, on a viewing area of greatly reduced size, the results you get from budget equipment are quite acceptable.

What I'm aiming to do is to pass on knowledge gained by observation, experience and chatting with professional TV crews during breaks in filming during a TV quiz show I once participated in. Whether you want to upload short clips to YouTube, or some other video hosting service, embed them into your website or blog or just keep them to show to your family and friends, this could be for you.

As the Chairman of an Amateur Dramatic group I used to belong to used to say:

'Just because you're an amateur, there's no reason to be unprofessional'

So, let's go and make some video!
