Prologue

I am as Jonah was. I have been swallowed by the leviathan of the deep and spit back upon the shore. I've smelled the breath of hell as I slipped into the belly of the beast. The burning heat of that acid environment tried to digest my very soul. By the Grace of God and the toughness that is engrained into my DNA I survived, but I brought something out with me too. I brought what will never leave me and has to be told. My perspective is an often-cumbersome weight that I carry as a shining light exposing what was once hidden in the dark recesses of our society, but is now mainstream American lies. I'm not a scientist or professionally trained statistician, I'm not some researcher who uses people as lab rats and has the same sterility with latex coated hands that poke and don't feel the pain they inflict.

I am an American patriot, an empathetic citizen who feels what he sees, and has seen much. My wrecked life and public convictions have led me to this book, the head of the spear I thrust into the beast that left me alive to fight upon the battleground of humanity.

This book is truth when you have been told lies. This book is real. A real look into what is hidden from your eyes as you watch the super sensationalized shows that exhibit people like animals, like the tiger didn't come from the jungle. Like the beast's natural home is the zoo, or the prisoners' natural home is a prison and they were snatched from a wholesome life by the crime they committed. I'm going to tell you about the jungle and the zoo, and the zookeepers too.

This is your opportunity to see the tragic world of the prison system from the inside the mind of someone whose mind has been stuck on record from the moment the justice system put a number on him. There is horror mixed with laughter as tragedy lives beside triumph and humor inside the fishbowl of humanity that a prison is. Open your mind and guard your heart as I pull on the strings that make you think about you and me and this great country of ours and why prisons have become such a big part of this great U.S. of A.
