Through the darkening woods, Damon's sharp eyes made out a pale shape sprawled on the leaf-strewn earth. As he approached, his paws skimming silently over the undergrowth, the shape began to resolve itself. There, the sharpness of an upturned jawline, the unbroken flow of bare skin along a proffered throat. It was impossible not to know him, to suck in breaths tinged with his scent like a shipwreck victim coming up for air. The distance between them was unbearable. He moved, leaping upward to land with his hands on either side of Luce's head, his now very human body pressed against the length of the boy spread out below him. Luce arched into him and moaned, Damon's echoing growl low and possessive. His tongue traced the contours of Luce's neck, his hips rolling to grind the aching heaviness of his cock against Luce's own. Luce whined, the sound laced with need, and Damon bit down on his shoulder, marking him, claiming him, his fingers roving over Luce's fevered skin. He reached down to wrap a hand around the pulsing insistence of them both, barely hanging on as he was overwhelmed by their sheer proximity, Luce's heartbeat drumming into him, the scent and sound and feel of him everywhere, driving Damon toward the edge—

He snapped awake the exact instant that his body tensed with his release. It took him a moment to come back to himself, finding the sheets wrapped around him, the empty silence of the room mocking. His head dropped forward into his hands.

He knew this had to stop before he lost his mind completely.
