A Lobster Lesson is a non-fiction nature story based on an outdoor learning experience that occurred in the summer of 2018. Exact names and locations have been modified for privacy. The rules and regulations for protecting the marine environment reflect those in effect in New England at the time.

Printed on acid-free paper.

Where do the boys begin?

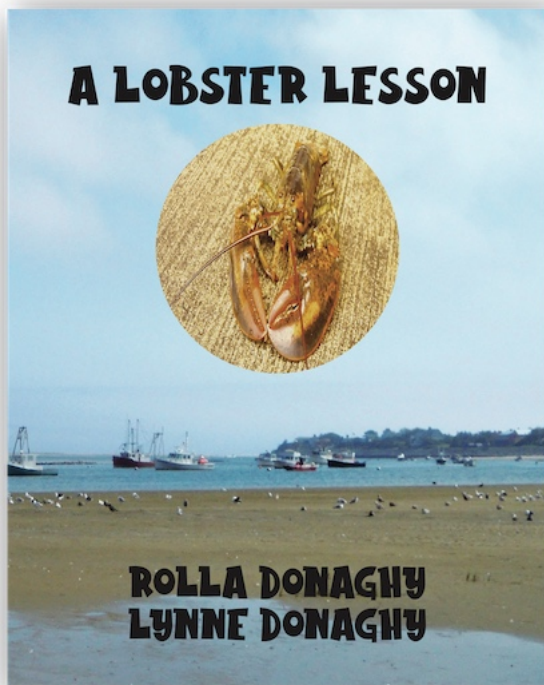

“Let’s go fishing,” says Frederick, with a yawn.

“I want to swim,” says Calvin, eating toast.

“Hey, guys, it would be fun to have a race on the beach,” says Jackson, looking for his sunglasses.

But the parents and grandparents have other plans.
