In the pale moonlight, when all of the children are asleep, a quiet, hollow drumming can be heard far beyond the cities, towns and villages. Soon the drumming turns into music made up of woodwind and string instruments. Then the jubilant merriment begins; dancing, singing and frolicking commence, for this is the gathering of the fairies. Most humans never hear this celebration. However, a lucky few exist who can quiet their minds just long enough to make out the chatter, laughter and, sometimes, even the music. Some may even be lucky enough to catch a glimpse, although it is rare. Molly was one of the lucky ones, for, as a child, she was lucky enough to have caught a glimpse of the fairy gathering. This is her story...
