Foreword

Education – no topic elicits more concern or comment in today’s society. We all seem to have strong opinions about our schools since this is one area where we all share some common experience. Those of us who work in the public schools every day welcome these comments.

Change is in the wind and those of us who would radically reform our schools embrace it. For our nation to maintain its edge in a world economy, we must have higher achievement. This can only be done through new partnerships. It means all stakeholders must establish a new common level of trust and respect as equals in pursuit of success. In this book, D. J. Mathews gives her perspective on how we can establish these new relationships. Join her in bringing reform home to the schools in your community.
