

When a loved one dies, they often leave behind more than memories. They leave rooms filled with possessions, full of emotional weight. Here is your much needed companion to help answer the question, "What do I do with all the stuff?"

The Weight of Our Things:
Navigating Possessions and Emotions After the Loss of Your Loved One
By Julie Martella

Order the book from the publisher Booklocker.com

<https://www.booklocker.com/p/books/13240.html?s=pdf>

or from your favorite neighborhood
or online bookstore.

The book cover features a light blue background with a white border. The title is centered and reads "THE Weight OF OUR THINGS". "THE" is in a small, dark blue, all-caps serif font. "Weight" is in a large, dark blue, elegant cursive script. "OF OUR" is in a medium-sized, dark blue, all-caps serif font. "THINGS" is in a large, dark blue, all-caps serif font. Below the title is the subtitle "Navigating Emotions and Possessions After the Loss of Your Loved One" in a smaller, dark blue, all-caps sans-serif font. At the bottom, the author's name "JULIE MARTELLA" is written in a dark blue, all-caps serif font. The cover is decorated with watercolor-style floral illustrations in shades of blue, pink, and white, with green leaves, framing the central text area.

THE Weight
OF OUR THINGS

Navigating Emotions and Possessions After the Loss of Your Loved One

JULIE MARTELLA

Copyright © 2024 Julie Martella

Print ISBN: 978-1-958891-91-9

Ebook ISBN: 979-8-88531-667-5

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, recording or otherwise, without the prior written permission of the author.

Published by BookLocker.com, Inc., Trenton, Georgia.

BookLocker.com, Inc.

2024

First Edition

Library of Congress Cataloguing in Publication Data

Martella, Julie

The Weight of Our Things: Navigating Possessions and Emotions After the Loss of Your Loved One by Julie Martella

Library of Congress Control Number: 2023923373

This book details the author's personal experiences with and opinions about death, dying and grief. The author is a peer coach, not a licensed legal nor mental health professional.

The author and publisher are providing this book and its contents on an "as is" basis and make no representations of any kind with respect to this book or its contents. The author and publisher disclaim all such representations, including for example mental health advice for a particular purpose.

The statements made about products and services have not been evaluated by the U.S. government. Please consult with your own legal, accounting, medical, or other licensed professional regarding the suggestions and recommendations made in this book.

Except as specifically stated in this book, neither the author or publisher, nor any authors, contributors, or other representatives will be liable for damages arising out of or in connection with the use of this book. This is a comprehensive limitation of liability that applies to all damages of any kind.

You understand that this book is not intended as a substitute for consultation with a licensed medical, legal or accounting professional. Before you begin any lifestyle change, consult a licensed professional to ensure that you are doing what is best for your situation.

This book provides content related to the topic of death and grieving. As such, use of this book implies your acceptance of this disclaimer.

What People Are Saying

Julie's gifts for compassion and realistic advice in organizing, disseminating of what was once cherished by someone we cherish, and moving into a new reality will be invaluable for anyone tasked with this challenge.

-Dale Cline, Widower, Pastor

Julie's book has been an invaluable resource for me. As a professional organizer, I've learned how to better understand my client's needs who have experienced loss. Learning about the brain's response to trauma, the important role that organization plays, and strategies to help my clients move forward has strengthened my professional skills. I'd highly recommend this book to anyone who wants to learn more about how to move forward after loss.

-Alisha Pangburn, Professional Organizer

The Weight of Our Things is a heartfelt approach to the challenging journey of managing possessions while navigating the turbulent waters of grief and loss. It is not a book about just tidying up but rather a guide of wisdom, compassion, and practicality for anyone facing the emotional upheaval of loss and the overwhelming task of sorting through belongings. Julie reminds us that our homes should be sanctuaries, places of healing and comfort, especially when we're grappling with grief. She demonstrates how possessions, often laden with emotions and memories, can be transformed into functional, organized, and nurturing environments that enhance well-being and quality of life. The inclusion of tidying and cleaning checklists, as well as real stories from individuals who have undergone similar journeys, adds a tangible layer of guidance and relatability to the book.

Julie Martella

-Mary Moore Hughes, Camp Widow Program Director, Virtual Programs Manager, Soaring Spirits International

Julie Martella is a widow warrior who has gained much wisdom from her own grief journey. In The Weight of Our Things, she breaks down the often overwhelming process of distributing a loved one's possessions as an act of love and honor. Reading her book is like having your best friend at your side, supporting you as you face the daunting task of separating "things" from memories.

-Edna Teller, Widow, Systems Analyst

Table of Contents

Forward.....	xiii
Acknowledgments.....	xv
Introduction.....	1
About You.....	3
My Personal Organizing Journey.....	7
How Can This Book Help You?	13
Rowen’s Story.....	19
What To Do and What Not To Do.....	23
Part 1: Understanding Your Mind & Emotions	25
1. Meet Your Brain	26
2. The Modern Brain.....	28
3. Thought Work.....	31
4. Thought Errors	37
5. Thought Checking.....	39
6. Buffering.....	41
7. Feeling Overwhelmed.....	43
8. Home Creates Its Own Kind of Overwhelm.....	47
9. The Role of Clutter	49
10. Removing Possessions Does Not Remove the Memories	51
11. Making Peace with Your Possessions.....	55
12. What’s the Solution?.....	58
13. The Story of Home.....	60
14. The Integration Process.....	62
15. Saying Goodbye and Hello	65
16. Managing Your Feelings.....	68

Grace’s Story	72
Part 2: The Organizing Process.....	77
17. The Transformative Power of Organizing	78
18. Finding Your “Big Why”.....	79
19. Legacy Creation	81
20. Envisioning	83
21. Lightening.....	87
Kathleen’s Story.....	91
22. Organizing.....	93
23. Curating.....	98
24. Maintaining	100
25. A Balanced Approach.....	105
26. Tidying versus Cleaning	107
Part 3: How To Get It Done.....	117
27. Finding Professional Help.....	118
Dana’s Story	120
28. If You Must Downsize on a Deadline.....	123
29. Thoughtful Repurposing	125
Ian’s Story	128
30. Strategies for Thoughtful Repurposing.....	129
31. Handling the Sentimental Items.....	139
32. Preserving Memories For Your Children	142
33. When It’s Time for a Time-Out	145
Bobby’s Story	147
34. Paperwork	150
35. Handling Your Big Project Day.....	152
36. Creating Your Dream Team.....	155
37. Decisions and Decision Fatigue.....	160
38. After the Project.....	162

The Weight of Our Things

39. Ways To Celebrate Your Hard Work (or take a break) .	164
Carrie's Story.....	165
Part 4: Everything Else	169
40. Your First “Practice” Project	170
41. Beware of the Minefields.....	172
42. A Note About Intimate Items.....	175
43. A Sample Project: The Garage	176
44. A House Cleaning Checklist.....	178
45. Take a Challenge!	182
46. 30-Day Sorting and Lightening Challenge	183
47. 30-Day Organizing Challenge	188
48. Thoughtfully Organizing Your Loved One’s Things	192
49. Having the Hard Conversations	198
50. The Value of Periodic Decluttering	203
51. Closing Notes.....	205
52. Footnotes.....	206

Introduction

Shall we start at the very beginning?

I'm Julie, and I'm a Home Strategist. My superpower is the ability to break things down into tiny pieces and then put them together again in new and beautiful ways. I find the best and leave the rest.

In the business world a strategist is someone who can analyze difficult situations. They identify opportunities and challenges and create strategies to navigate and improve outcomes. It's a process that successful organizations use to create change and find vision.

I take those same tactics and teach clients how to create meaningful, purposeful change by equipping them to think like a Home Strategist. Then they can use those new skills to enhance their lives. The fundamental skills include learning how to be strategic, purposeful, goal oriented, and emotionally resilient. They learn do this first with how they think (mind management) and then apply it to their physical world (their homes).

The title of Home Strategist has evolved as my understanding of home has deepened. I have always had love and respect for the transformative power of home, particularly during times of life transitions and profound loss. Little did I know that having to rebuild my life and relearn my home after an internal brain injury was just the beginning of this journey. It served as a dress rehearsal for what was to come.

Just as I was completely unprepared to deal with the sudden death of my husband, I was equally unprepared to deal with the life I was handed, and the logistics that came along with it. I realized that the core guiding principles I had developed now had an entirely deeper application. They could help me rebuild my life yet again. And if they could help me, I knew they could help others.

Can you think of anyone who might need to create change and find a new vision more than a someone who has experienced the profound loss of a loved one?

It is my highest honor to work with men and women who have suffered the traumatic loss of a death and help them re-imagine life and home. I am here for you when you are ready to deal with the new life you've been handed, or when you're ready to let go, and it doesn't matter if it's been three weeks or ten years.

And I am here for you right now as you struggle to create some calm from the chaos, manage the overwhelm, and to meaningfully and thoughtfully deal with the possessions of your loved one.

About You

Now that you know about me, what about you?

You might be at the start of a journey – a journey for which you are not prepared, do not want to take, and are not sure of the destination. You’ve lost your spouse or partner and may be struggling with one of two issues:

1. You have an entire house to empty, or
2. You have a house to sort through and “lighten” because your loved one is gone (lightening is another word for sorting, which you and I will get into later).

Regardless of the circumstance, you struggle with getting your mind wrapped around your upcoming task. You may be wondering, “Where do I begin?” or “What am I going to do with all this stuff?” It’s overwhelming.

This book will provide you with a roadmap of how to get from where you are to where you want to be. No matter your path, it begins with understanding and managing your mind. That alone will give you the motivation to get started.

If you are not ready, just read this book and tuck it away; you will know when it’s time.

Here's the reality: there are no grief police coming to check on you. There is no rule that says sorting and "lightening" has to take place. If your possessions are at a manageable level and not creating a hazard of any kind, there is NO RUSH. Again, there is no hurry... unless you've been faced with a triggering event, something outside of your control that is making you begin this project.

This is where I come in. I can help manage your mind and connect with your purpose so that you can begin and finish this very difficult task! I can help you understand why letting go is so hard so that you can tap into your inner resources. I can teach you to think like a Home Strategist.

You can choose to do nothing with the possessions. You can leave your home exactly as it was when your person died. Many people make this choice, and they would never pick up this book. Home, with all its artifacts, becomes either a cozy sanctuary or a functional shrine. Many people are comforted when surrounded with the memories. This choice allows you to do nothing. For some that is the perfect solution. Others may find it leaves them feeling stuck after a while.

But, for those individuals faced with an external force pushing the timeline, or are seeking peace of mind, dealing with the stuff takes on a different meaning. It becomes a pathway to a "new normal;" a way to move towards their future.

The Weight of Our Things

You can make the decision to sort through the possessions, and make the necessary choices required of each item. Some things you will choose to keep; some you will let go. When it's the right time for you, you will know.

This is the choice of moving forward into whatever your future holds. This is how you find your path back to life and this is the choice of saying goodbye, whether in tiny increments or in giant sweeping gestures (like emptying a house) so that you may find a new hello.

The fact that you are looking at this book tells me that you are faced with the second choice; the choice to sort and let go of your loved one's possessions, perhaps so you can move into your future whether figuratively or literally. You are so brave!

For whatever reason you NEED to go through the stuff, this book will help you with that daunting task!

1. Meet Your Brain

The limbic or primitive brain is actually a collection of structures including the brainstem and limbic system that have the combined focus of keeping you alive. You may have heard it referred to as the “reptilian” or “ancient” brain. It is responsible for all the functions that helped your early ancestors survive, such as:

- Survival instincts include the fight-or-flight response, habit creation, and primitive sensory processing.
- Primitive drives such as hunger, thirst, sexual behavior, warmth, and shelter.
- Regulation of essential bodily functions such as breathing, heart rate, blood pressure, and body temperature.

When your brain enters survival mode, your limbic brain takes the reins, temporarily hijacking the rational prefrontal cortex (PFC). You may find yourself feeling “driven” by the need to survive. You may feel hyper vigilant and look for threats where none exist. You may find yourself not wanting to get dressed, leave the house, or engage with others.

When you are not under stress, your brain has the luxury of time to process information and to filter it through the modern parts of your brain (the PFC) to determine if the input is a fact or a thought – and if that thought is actually true or just feels true. This understanding of your brain’s mechanics will empower you to make conscious choices and manage stress more effectively.

Have you ever seen pieces of candy progressing down a conveyer belt? Imagine you have the job of wrapping each piece in a little wrapper. When things are slow, you wrap the candies confidently and send them on their way. As the equipment gains speed, you are unable to keep up, and candies end up everywhere except where they should be.

Your limbic brain works in much the same way. When your brain has too many, or very difficult, thoughts to process, you can lose the ability to rationally analyze them.

The limbic brain does not care what is true or not, it is just trying to help you survive in the moment. When your brain is in “survival mode” it will process information as fast as possible – not as efficiently as possible.

Your primitive brain will prioritize survival strategies such as seeking comfort or food instead of assessing the validity of your thoughts. In survival mode, you may be more likely to make decisions based on faulty information than on reality. This is the number one reason why it is important to question the stories your brain tells you in difficult or stressful moments.

8. Home Creates Its Own Kind of Overwhelm

Now you can see why dealing with the possessions after the death of your spouse or partner can be such a challenge. It has the potential to meet every part of the definition of overwhelm! The process of organizing your home and doing “the big sort” is part of the outward, physical manifestation of your grief. That can cut deep.

Letting go of possessions may feel like letting go of a chapter in your life and acknowledging the finality of your loss. If their things are gone, then your brain must finally accept that they are too.

Decision fatigue is real and plays a role in your feelings of overwhelm. Sorting through your loved one’s belongings requires a lot of single-minded focus and determination as you decide what to keep, donate, or repurpose. All of these decisions require time, physical energy, and mental focus. You may find yourself in possession of none of those resources, which makes decision-making that much more difficult.

Thought work: Which of these situations, if any, are factors in your current feelings around decluttering or sorting? What are some things you can do to ease the pressure you might be feeling?

There are times when you may choose to not part with your loved one’s belongings. For many people the belongings bring emotional comfort and connection. Some people aren't ready to let go, and some feel the weight of being the memory holder for children, grandchildren, or other family members.

There are no hard and fast rules.

If your loved one's items don't create a clutter issue or impede daily living, there is no harm in keeping them. It's truly all about you and when you're ready.

When a loved one dies, they often leave behind more than memories. They leave rooms filled with possessions, full of emotional weight. Here is your much needed companion to help answer the question, "What do I do with all the stuff?"

The Weight of Our Things:
Navigating Possessions and Emotions After the Loss of Your Loved One
By Julie Martella

Order the book from the publisher Booklocker.com

<https://www.booklocker.com/p/books/13240.html?s=pdf>

or from your favorite neighborhood
or online bookstore.