Hi: I'm big, bold Ben better known as BBB. I'm a swamp deer and I've been invited to travel with Santa's team this Christmas Eve. I've been dreaming about this trip for years.

You probably won't believe this but I'm a singing reindeer too and since Santa loves music and kids, I think he will be quite happy to have me on his team.

(Begins to sing)

I'm so ex - ci - ted, I just can't wait.

³
To see Dear San - ta Is real - ly great.

I'm so excited, I just can't wait
To share the fun, to share the joy.

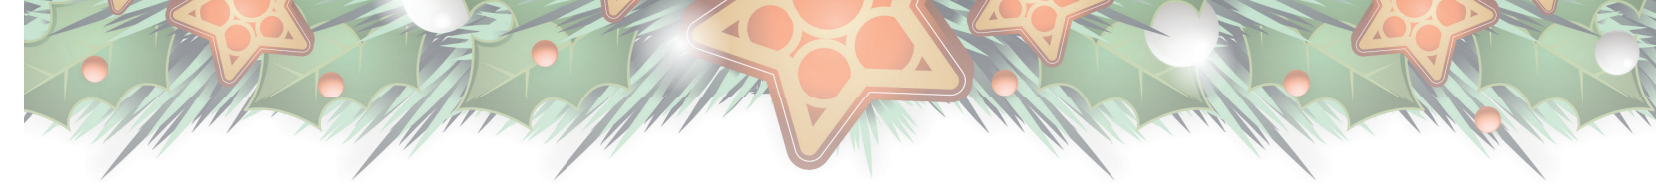

I just arrived at the North Pole and am about to meet my new partner, White Knight. I've been told he's a big albino deer and is quite shy. It seems other animals don't like him, so they chase him and even fight with him. I see him standing alone at the edge of the woods so I'm going over to ask him to join me in finding Santa. Both of us have come a long way from our native homes to help Santa this year.

We find Santa near the workshop talking to chief toy maker Louie, who builds the wheeled toys. Louie knows I love everything with wheels. When I visited his workshop last year, I was so excited to find the trains and played with them for a long time. I busted a few wheels off and he shouted at me and ran me off because the workers didn't have time to fix them. Louie was very upset, but for me it sure was fun.

In spite of that little problem, Louie still likes me. He's a happy man and loves working with Santa and he has tried several times to get me on Santa's main team. But something is different at the North Pole this year.

Nearby we see Santa's team waiting to be harnessed as soon as the workshop crew is finished loading packages into Santa's bags and filling the sleigh. We start to join them but notice Santa doesn't look very jolly. He is speaking quite loudly to Louie so White Knight and I step closer to hear their conversation.

Santa explains, "Louie, we have a problem. I've been told this year I am only allowed to deliver toys to children in North and South America. And I must be finished in three hours." Shaking his head he continues, "I think that's impossible!"

Louie is surprised and questions, “Who said this? Everyone knows you’re the boss on Christmas Eve. What about the children who live in the rest of the world? Don’t they get toys? I don’t understand.”

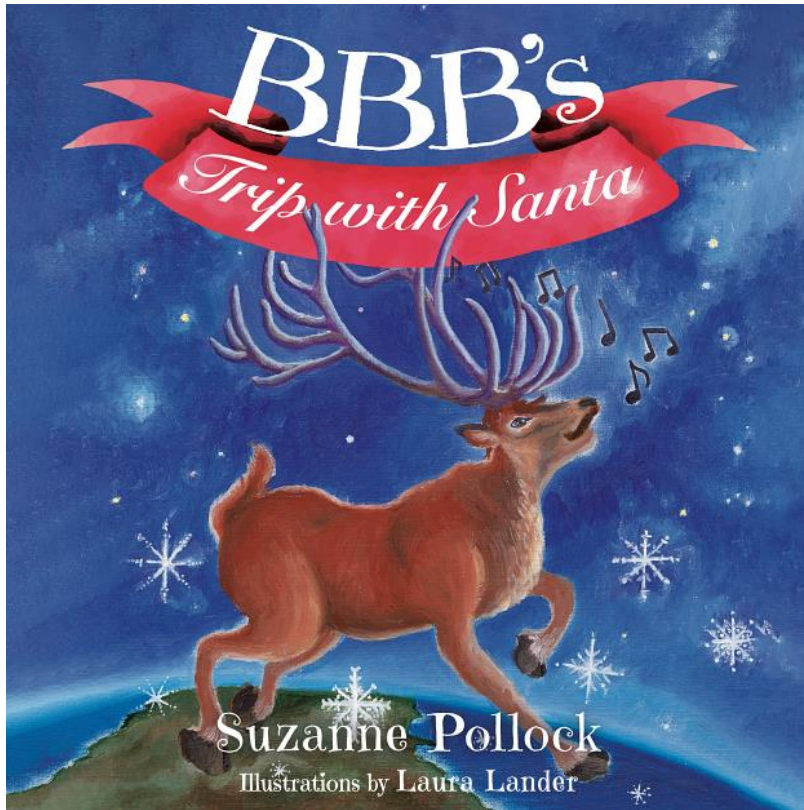

Santa kicked the snow away at his feet in frustration as he continued, “Louie, I was told that children all over the world don’t want to wait to open their gifts anymore on Christmas morning. They want to open them now on Christmas Eve. To answer your question about getting toys to the rest of the world, I’ve been told they’re using planes, boats, trains, cars, anything that’s faster than my great team of reindeer.”

Louie frowned saying, “This is awful Santa. Christmas is a special day for everyone in the whole world and children want to get their gifts from Santa. I just can’t believe this is happening.”

Santa shook his head in disgust, “Louie you and I know that the world has lots of challenges including the weather. I’m thinking that if there’s bad weather anywhere in the world, the machines can’t and won’t deliver the packages. And besides, how do they know where children live? I can’t believe they can guarantee that every child will get a gift. I’m baffled by this idea and also quite upset about this game.”

Completely disgusted Louie said, “Game? Santa delivering gifts to every child in the world is not a game. Who gave you this order?”

Santa didn’t answer. Instead, he said, “A few days ago when I got this message, I knew I needed help tonight. I sent word to my world-wide communication team to see if they could find me a couple extra reindeer that were very, very strong. I’m so happy that big, bold Ben and White Knight will join our team tonight. They will give us more power to travel the Americas faster.”
