INTRODUCTION

The stories, observations, and information contained in these pages, are but a small portion of almost 60 years of a Mountain Man's journals. None of this was designed to be published. Due to the vast amount of misinformation circulating around the Bigfoot craze, it seemed necessary. Most of the people mentioned in these stories, are no longer with us. There are no pictures, (because the Mountain Man never owned a camera). What does a hermit need with pictures? Personal items were omitted. As were the strange things, that didn't seem appropriate, for an introduction into Bigfoot's World. Many of these stories have been shared on the internet, but they came from these journals. Some of the stories were shortened, and a few were split into two. All of the observations are true. The information has been thoroughly researched. The thoughts and opinions, are the Mountain Man's alone. The main purpose of these pages are to enlighten, entertain, revitalize the common sense, and make you think. All of the stories have a lesson that explains the basics as to who Bigfoot is.

COMING OUT OF BIGFOOT'S WORLD

While in the Mountains, I knew where Bigfoot lived in 5 states. (explained in another story). I had no idea that Bigfoot was such a popular subject, until I moved back down to society. I had worked and lived in the Mountains for almost 30 years. Unfortunately, the many years of being a Mountain Man, took it's toll on my body. I could no longer do what I once could, to sustain life. I retired to the Colorado Rockies, where I remain to this day.

Even though the town I moved to was small, the amount of people, traffic, and technology, sent me into a deep depression. Fortunately, my logging buddies picked me up, and taught me what I needed to know. One of their wives was teaching me computer and the internet. Just for fun, she typed the word "Bigfoot", and here came a bunch of articles, all claiming that Bigfoot was a mythical creature. They said that only a few people had claimed to have seen them. I was thinking at the time, mythical? I'd either seen, or interacted with them well over a hundred times. All of the information that I had put in my journals, for the last 2 years, was how to avoid them. I tried to contact some of the people writing these articles. They acted as if I was some sort of crackpot, that belonged in a padded cell. I knew where dozens of their caves were at the time. I offered to take them there, but none of them were interested. The few that did respond, said that they were, too busy. Too busy for "real research". Huh? That's when I knew they weren't really serious researchers.

I finally decided that trying to convince anyone that Bigfoot was indeed real, was a lesson in futility. The only thing I was gaining, was a reputation for being a nutcase. I really couldn't understand it. Everyone I knew in the mountains, had no doubt. What's wrong with these city people? I didn't dare tell them how many UFO's I saw flying around at night. They would have locked me up for sure. I believe my frustration at the time, and the ridicule since, is the reasoning for my disdain for Bigfoot critics, and, (so-called), researchers.

I have seen many weird things in my life. I know for fact that I couldn't have seen them all. So when someone says they saw this or that, strange whatever, regardless of how bizarre, or unbelievable it may sound, I want to hear their story. Once I've heard it, I guarantee, I will be asking questions. That's the only way you get the whole picture. Even if the story sounds a little far fetched, or even totally unbelievable, I would never say, "Your full of it", as a statement of FACT. I may think it, but I would never say it, because truthfully?, I wasn't there, and I don't know for FACT either way. Plus, my stories seem a little out there on their own. The really bizarre stories, won't appear in this book, probably the next, (if there is a next)

The "Finding Bigfoot" show started in 2011. When I saw the promo I got excited. Finally people are going to see, what I've been trying to tell them for years. It started out great! They were finally interviewing others that have seen them. Then they strapped on their lights, and took off in the middle of the night, to run through the Forest. I knew right then, that they had no clue as to what they were doing. I thought to myself, "what do they expect to see in the dark?" .Then they started talking back and forth on their talkies. I thought, "you obviously have never been in the forest before". You can see a light a mile away, and hear voices even further. When they started howling, and hitting trees with branches, I was done. I seriously couldn't watch anymore of whatever they were calling this. What truly amazes me, is that the "finding Bigfoot", show ran for 6 years! They had one mission, and they failed miserably! Yet, they are to this day, all celebrities? They're on talk shows, Bigfoot conventions, radio shows, giving advise on how to find Bigfoot? How the heck would they know? I think only one had ever had so much as a glance of Bigfoot, before the show started. Whenever I meet a researcher, I tell him/her that I've spent well over 20 years living in the Forest. Then wait to see if they ask questions, (or try to one up me with their experience). I'm still waiting for one to ask me a question, lol

To be clear, I am not a Bigfoot researcher. In fact, Wikipedia defines the job of a researcher as: {Systematic study taken to increase knowledge}. My knowledge came from living around them. Why would I need to know more? I couldn't get anyone to listen to what I already know. I personally could care less about the footprints, I'd seen so many times before. The pole messages left in the Forest, that only they know the real reason for. (I know a few) To date, I've seen way more fake researchers, than I have real ones. It seems that all you have to do to become famous these days, is tell other people's story on U-Tube. Be careful who you trust, to tell you the truth.
