Animal Healing and Communication

When speaking of the soul, we naturally think of human beings, but Moon has explained that animals have a type of soul, too. He calls them “fragment souls” and in Volume One I detailed how they acquired such souls. According to Moon, cetaceans possess the largest fragment of a soul, making them very similar to us.

In late 1991, Diane Stein informed me that she was writing a book about natural health care and healing for cats and dogs. This work would incorporate various forms of alternative medicine, as well as several therapies, which would prove valuable in caring for these domestic pets. She asked me if I would consult my guides about animal healing and communication. In addition, I was to ask whether animals possess chakras because she wanted to include this type of information in her book.

Diane also contacted another person who did channeling and is named Laurel Steinhice. She requested the same details from her guides. I did not know Laurel at that time, but I had been told by Diane that the messages, which we were receiving, bore strong similarities. This proved to be true because the information we were both given about animals' chakras was startlingly similar. These energy systems were explained in Diane's book in the form of diagrams. This non-fiction work was entitled Natural Healing for Dogs & Cats and was published in 1993.

A second book, The Natural Remedy Book for Dogs & Cats, was also written by Diane and published in 1994. It contained the previously published diagrams of dogs' and cats' chakra systems and a list of the colors associated with those energy points. I wrote an article on crystal healing for pets, and it was included in this book.

When Diane indicated that she would like my guides to write about communication with and healing for animals, I had no idea that the resulting messages would be so extensive. They began in December 1991 and continued through to June 1992. However, the majority of these channeled words were not included in Natural Healing for Dogs & Cats. Some were quoted or briefly summarized, while others were not. Therefore, it would seem to be of value to the reader if I document what my guides told me almost eleven years ago.

Animals' Fragment Souls:

In the first message it would appear that I was channeling from the group, but before long Moon took over.

“As was previously given when we were first making contact with you, animals upon your planet hold within them merely a fragment of the original souls who first projected into the consciousness of Earth. When newly formed, your planet, as with all matter within the physical universe, was but an extension of the awareness of the Source, created as a consequence of the conflict between the original eight supersouls and their followers. This consciousness, once joined with that of souls, created a divergence of life, beginning with minerals and elements and progressing, eventually, into animal life.

You have been told that once the original man form was created, many souls withdrew from the animal forms so that they might partake of the physical within this new creation, and that merely a fragment of the departing soul remained within the animal body. For your understanding it is necessary to explain that this fragment was far less than the fragment of the whole soul which projects into what could be termed “man” throughout the physical universe, the fragment which has been referred to as the facet soul. The fragment within an animal form is but a fraction of a facet soul, yet it behaves exactly as that of its larger part, projecting into all its incarnations within the physical plane, simultaneously.

You have also been taught that where souls lingered the longest within animal forms, thus, a greater portion was retained of that soul, and that these are the animals which you consider having more intelligence than those which hold a smaller fragment...”

At this point of the message, Moon came in and it was he who usually gave information on animals throughout the following months.

“...Yet I would ask you to re-examine your notions of intelligence, for what you perceive as an ability to communicate, to mimic and to befriend your kind is merely the ability of all consciousness which has joined with soul consciousness within some physical form throughout the physical universe. As I am often wont to tell you, like as like; and where there is a larger portion of soul consciousness projected into matter, then there is a recognition of and an empathy with those life forms which contain a similar, even if it be lesser degree, of soul consciousness.

Do not mistake my meaning here; earthly animals are not to be equated with humans. Indeed, many of them would be insulted by the thought. Even though there is soul recognition and empathy, the path which humans have chosen to pursue is very different from that of animals, even though the soul goal is the same, being that of ultimate oneness...”

In the remainder of this message Moon said animals are not so involved with the physical plane, as are humans, also that they are much closer to the other levels of existence. Their consciousness, or energy, like ours, came originally from the Source, but has developed differently from ours. It contains a greater degree of the consciousness of the Source than of the soul, whereas the opposite is true of humans.

Source Consciousness:

Three weeks later, Moon elaborated further on Source consciousness/energy:

“...Look to them {animals} as your teachers, for they are far closer to WHAT IS, having more Source consciousness than soul consciousness. They are as man originally was and needs to be, again, in order to return to the oneness. Man believes he has charge over the animals and, indeed, this is so, but not because he is superior to them, as he considers. He was created for many reasons and with many purposes, not least of which was and is to protect the volume of Source consciousness which resides within your planet and the totality of its life forms.

I have spoken previously of the imbalance which exists upon your planet, the ruthless destruction of much of its consciousness. That message was referring to its Source consciousness and the equally large departure of soul consciousness. Source consciousness is being enhanced in many ways. By protecting endangered species and by decreasing experimentation and slaughter of animals, man has begun to make a start. The increase of changed souls from other dimensions, as well as what may be termed “the enlightened universe,” upon your planet also adds to the quantity of Source consciousness. These are ancient souls, and that which determines soul age is the amount of Source consciousness present. When the Source consciousness is dominant, then the soul may be considered ancient.

A third and, indeed, a most significant way of increasing Source consciousness is the use of crystals and gemstones, for they were formed when Earth was young and well-laden with Source consciousness. By the use of these stones, their energy, or consciousness, is vibrating within the sphere of your planet's consciousness and, thus, some harmony is achieved.

Within the depths of Earth there are great reservoirs of Source consciousness, or energy, and these also are released into Earth's sphere of consciousness when alignment takes place between Earth and her children. Rocks and all minerals are totally aligned as they contain pure Source consciousness. Plant life aligns during the hours of darkness, as do all other simple and complex life forms, including animals and man. As plants have continual contact with the Earth Mother, their alignment is complete during the hours of darkness. Animals, which live in the open, are also able to attain complete alignment, for they lay down upon the Mother, but for those which are housed in buildings, total alignment is not achieved because there is not direct contact. This equally applies to man who frequently beds himself upon places other than the ground. All life within water aligns with the Source consciousness through the element of water which is a child of the Earth Mother.

As I have written, there are great reservoirs of Source consciousness within Earth herself and these are linked by energy channels or ley lines. The power even within these channels is immense and alignment is possible also during daylight, if all animals, including man, lay down upon these channels. Total attunement to these many different channels is very necessary, for some are far more intense than others. Animals have mostly maintained their ability to distinguish those which are well balanced for them, but man has sacrificed this knowledge in his pursuit of the physical and, thus, often places himself upon or within the vicinity of energy channels which bring negative consequences for him and those who come after him. His actions can be influenced positively and negatively by these channels and, in turn, the energy vibrations can be affected in a like manner within these localities by his actions...

All animals have a natural understanding of the Earth Mother's energy which is her consciousness and very life blood. They utilize it in their daily life, their search for food, their patterns of migration and hibernation, their companionship with both other animals and man and, above all, their respect and guardianship of their home planet..."

In 1992 I knew nothing about geopathic stress, but a number of years later I learned of this theory that there are certain energy channels within the earth that are detrimental to our health and well-being. It is obvious from the above message that Moon was familiar with this concept.

At a later date, I asked for more information for Diane's book, and I received many pages of automatic writing about animals' chakras. The message began as follows:

"There is much rejoicing within the realms where fragment souls, known to you as animals, are residing, for this book, which is to be written, is unique. There has most certainly been other works on animals, but this book, because it will contain channeled information, both given to the one who writes for me and also imparted to the one known to Diane, has information which has not at any other time been given to earthbound souls...

Throughout man's existence, there have been individuals who have communicated with animals, and you have stories both within your history and your folklore about these individuals. This book will contain a wealth of information which has not previously been known, and which will, as it were, open the eyes and the understanding of those who read it, so that they may appreciate the blessing that is given to those who dwell upon Earth. The companionship and love which is always abounding upon your planet within the kingdom known to you as the animal world..."

When I submitted the messages to Diane, I had no idea Moon was correct in saying that her book was unique. However, after it was published, I learned that it was the very first time the details of animals' subtle anatomy had appeared in print.

"Within your time frame, the animals, which man considers he has domesticated, are large in number, but within this number he considers dogs and cats closer to him than most other animals. In other time frames, in other possible realities, different animals enjoy the position which dogs and cats have in your particular time frame and reality. Within the future time frame of your reality, other animals will gain the status which dogs and cats now hold, and it is not of any great importance as to which animals will hold these exalted positions, as man would see it. The emphasis lies with the fact that man must always keep himself in harmony with some animals, otherwise he is truly lost, for, as I have explained, there is more Source energy within animals than within man. If he separates himself totally from animals, then he loses, as it were, his lifeline back to the Source, to his beginnings and ultimately to his end...”

Animals' Chakras:

“...It is required to know within the world of dogs and cats whether these creatures possess chakras and, yes, as with all life forms, they do. They do not have as many as man due to the incidence of more Source energy, or consciousness, being within them. Therefore, there is less need for energy vortices, or chakras, as you so know them...”

Moon then went on to give in this message and a further one the information about animals' chakras and the energy “linkages” between them. As previously mentioned, Diane reproduced all of these details in the form of diagrams which are well worth viewing as they provide a simple and easy understanding of a somewhat complex issue. In this book I will just give a brief synopsis of what Moon told me.

Animals have major, minor and bud chakras. The three major ones are a combined crown and brow chakra, located near the top of the head, a solar plexus chakra, located on the spine just before the body narrows into the hindquarters, and a combined sacral and root chakra, located in the center of the belly. Minor chakras are found in the feet of animals and at the base and end of their tails. Bud chakras are in the process of developing and are in the nose, the throat and at the base of the ears.

Points of interest to note are as follows: there is no heart chakra because, unlike man, animals have plenty of Source consciousness/energy which is filled with agape; the minor chakras help guide animals to the places of “Source energy channels” where they can then lay down and absorb that energy through the sacral/root chakra; and in primates and marine mammals the throat bud chakra has grown because they have “extended their once limited physical communications and their corresponding chakra buds have, therefore, swelled.”

There are a number of chakra energy linkages {see Diane's diagrams} of which the most important is probably the one between the crown/brow and sacral/root chakras. This channel allows animals to manifest food and shelter, when they are living in the wild or without care from humans, and to communicate with one another and man. We also possess a similar linkage between our crown and root/base chakras, but over time we have neglected it to the point where it has almost atrophied. However, it can be strengthened when we assume the fetal position during sleep and when we practice Yoga.

Healing Animals:

In April 1992, one of my other guides, named Akaal, gave advice on how to use, within healing sessions, the information Moon had given about animals' chakras and energy channels. Before reproducing his message, however, I would like to emphasize that as well as using these healing techniques you should also be consulting a qualified veterinary practitioner to ensure your pet's total well-being and health care.

Akaal explained:

“Animals are creatures of the physical plane and as such will benefit to some degree from traditional forms of medicine and medical treatment. They will, however, derive much more from chakra enhancement, gem stones and herbs. Dogs and cats in particular will also sustain prolonged periods of physical existence when there is love, understanding and communication with certain human, caring companions.

In chakra enhancement the triangular-shaped linkage between the three main chakras is of great importance. When the animal is ill due to physical sickness or injury, the healer should work with the belly {sacral/root} and back {solar plexus} chakra linkage for the lower half of the body, which would encompass the lower back, lower abdomen, hindquarters and tail. Also, the head {crown/brow} and back chakra linkage for the upper half of the body, involving the upper back, upper abdomen, front legs, chest, neck and head.

At times, all three chakras will require attention and this necessity would be made known to the healer during the healing. The healer's projective hand {right if right-handed, left if left-handed} should be placed on either the belly or the head chakra and the receptive hand {left if right-handed, right if left-handed} should simultaneously make contact with the back chakra. No pressure should be applied at any time and, indeed, for some healers it would be more appropriate to remain immediately beyond contact with the animal's body.

During the time of contact or near contact, Source energy in whatever form is acceptable to the healer should be visualized as moving from the belly or head chakras, along the energy channels and into the back chakra, where it is transformed into physical energy which sustains, regenerates and heals the dog or cat. Then think of this energy radiating out from the back chakra to all parts of the body or just to those particular places which are afflicted. It may be visualized as traveling along lesser energy channels which connect the back chakra with the entire minor and bud chakras. Again, this energy should be 'seen' in a manner with which the healer feels comfortable.

There is no determined time frame for this session of healing, and quite often the animal will indicate in some manner, such as movement, when it should cease. At other times, especially when an animal is too sick to initiate a conclusion, the healer will 'know' by a change in sensations felt within her palms or merely by a general sense of rightness.

When the dis-ease of the dog or cat resides within the non-physical self, its fragment soul, then the powerful head and belly chakra linkage must be utilized. This type of healing should only be attempted by one who has a sound and harmonious relationship with the particular dog or cat. Source consciousness, which passes along this linkage, is raw and volatile and the animal may react unpredictably if the healer's essence is not in harmony with that of the animal. Ideally, both healer and animal should spring from the same supersoul essence, and this will frequently happen, for pets and their owners are often drawn to one another by the attraction of essence melding...”

When giving this type of healing, Akaal said the projective hand should be on the crown/brow chakra and the receptive hand on the sacral/root chakra. At the same time, the healer can be projecting loving and peaceful thoughts towards the dog or cat. He added that if the soul level illness was severe, then a number of similar healing sessions would be needed.

Communication with Animals:

This particular channeling session ended with the following advice about communicating with pets:

“...When communication exists between an animal and its owner, it can be enhanced by deliberate contact of the projective hand with the head or belly chakra. This may often happen accidentally when patting and stroking take place, but when conscious effort is made, even more intensified communication will occur. If the receptive hand is placed over either of these chakras and the conscious mind is stilled in meditation, then the 'words' of the dog or cat will be 'heard' and understood.

We have more to give at another time...”

There is a chapter in Volume One devoted to what are called the “Earth Changes,” which our planet is presently experiencing. These are difficult times for us all as we attempt to adjust to the increase in the vibrational energy of Earth. While receiving the messages about animals, it occurred to me that it might also be stressful for them, so I asked what people can do to keep their pets happier and healthier during this period of energy upgrading.

Moon quickly responded:

“I say to you love the animals, take care of them and protect them. The progression of your planet affects them equally as it affects you. They are as much a part of the New Beginning as those humans, who remain, will be. {According to Moon, many of us will leave the physical plane during his predicted cataclysmic events} There is within the animal kingdom a certain understanding of what is to come and it is far greater than human comprehension or awareness. It exists because, as I have previously taught, animals hold within themselves much greater quantities of Source consciousness than soul consciousness. Yet even so, this transition time can be made easier for the animals by their owners speaking, as it were, to their pets about the forthcoming changes.

Each day, the owner should be utilizing the head and belly chakra linkage to communicate with their particular pet. This should always be happening between owners and pets, but it is of greater importance during these difficult times. Words of love, of peace, of understanding should be given to the animal, as well as explanations of the changes which are coming, of the progression which is taking place. Each owner should emphasize with each pet that these things are as they should be because they are all a part of WHAT IS.

Indeed, there is an understanding of this within each animal, but the physical manifestations of change can be frightening to its fragment soul. Owners should convey to their pets the promise of companionship and protection throughout the progression. They should share their anticipation of the new awareness, the beginning of Omega, when all earthly life forms will communicate and interact with ease at the astral level.

It is also required that owners, whenever and wherever possible, allow their pets to align themselves with the Earth Mother. This I have spoken of previously. This means that owners should let their animals lay down upon the earth to allow the energy flow to be absorbed by the belly chakra. This should happen daily, whenever and wherever possible. This continual alignment, together with conversations with the owner, will help the animal to understand what is transpiring. The energy from the Earth Mother will endow the animal with the ability to pass through the changes and to accomplish progression. Therefore, do not deny your pet, your dog, your cat, the opportunity to be outside in the open where it can frequently lay down upon the Earth Mother, where it can find true alignment with her.”

Animals' Auras:

I then asked Moon if animals have auras or subtle bodies and he assured me that they do. He said their Etheric, Lower and Higher Mental bodies are quite minimal in size, whereas the Emotional, the Intuitional, the Spiritual and the Divine bodies extend much further than those of humans. This is because they possess far more Source consciousness than we do. Moon added that many animals, and in particular cats, prefer to function at the astral level. This would then explain why many cats and dogs appear to look at things that we cannot see with our physical eyes.

In one final channeling session about animals, I asked Moon if animals can see the auras of other animals and humans, as some people are able to do. He answered that they do this much more easily than we can because their crown and brow chakras are combined. They recognize one another or a person, even at great distances, by 'seeing' the aura. This happens long before their physical senses of smell, hearing and sight are used. Also, because parts of their auras extend so widely, their auras meet up with another animal or human aura before there is physical contact.

Moon explained:

“...This long distance, if you will, knowing and recognition manifests itself as low growls, bristling of fur, arching of back when disharmony is approaching, or tail wagging, purring and excited yelping when an harmonious aura has come into contact with the dog's or cat's aura.

I have spoken of communication through the head and belly chakra linkage and, indeed, this is the ultimate sharing which can take place between owners and their pets. Yet much of the constant communication between animals and humans happens at the auric level, and for many human individuals there is only an outputting and, thus, they are unaware of their message being received. Nevertheless, the dog or cat 'hears' their auric 'words' and responds with either love or aggression.

At the time of the approaching of a human with whom a dog or cat is in harmony, specific physical movements are often observed. Cats will rub their heads against hard objects or role over upon the ground. Dogs will also role over and rub their backs upon the ground. These actions are to stimulate the head and back chakras so that they are primed, as it were, for the forthcoming physical contact.

Both dogs and cats will also often expose their underbellies, and this is interpreted as a sign of utter trust. In the outer reality of your physical world this is valid, for by offering you its total vulnerability the animal is saying, "I do not believe you will harm me in any way." Yet at the inner level, where true reality dwells, the animal is readying its belly chakra for the anticipated deeper communication through the head and belly chakra linkage; for the ultimate communion of love between a facet soul and a fragment soul, each of whom originally sprang from the oneness, the Source. Indeed, for some there is the beginning of soul rejoining which continues on and does not cease at the point of physical separation, for many owners and their pets are of the same essence, the same oversoul. They are being reunited with a fragment of their total being.

I have now given sufficient for Diane's book..."

By sharing these insights into the subtle energy of animals, I hope I am strengthening the bond that many of us already have with both our domesticated pets and all other members of the animal kingdom that co-exist with us on our planet.
