Lonnie the Loon
Flies South for the Winter

While flying south for the winter, Lonnie the Loon is blown off course by strong winds. Instead of landing on coastal waters, he ends up on a lake in the middle of the desert. Lonnie becomes friends with an unlikely character, a Gambel Quail named Quincy. Quincy teaches Lonnie about the desert animals. Using a free QR Code Reader App, the reader is able to listen to a variety of animal calls and songs. Also see: Lonnie the Loon Learns to Fly, Lonnie the Loon Finds His Home and Lonnie the Loon Learns to Call

Lonnie the Loon and his friend are playing on the lake.

Lonnie dives under a boat and pops up on the other side.

His friend dives under the boat too and pops up next to Lonnie.

The fisherman in the boat watches the Loons as they play.

Interesting Fact: The Loons' winter plumage is a combination of gray and white.

Lonnie's Dad calls for Lonnie with a Wail.

“Lonnie, it's almost time for you and your friends to fly south for the winter.”

Lonnie and his friend circle around his Dad. “Why, Dad?”

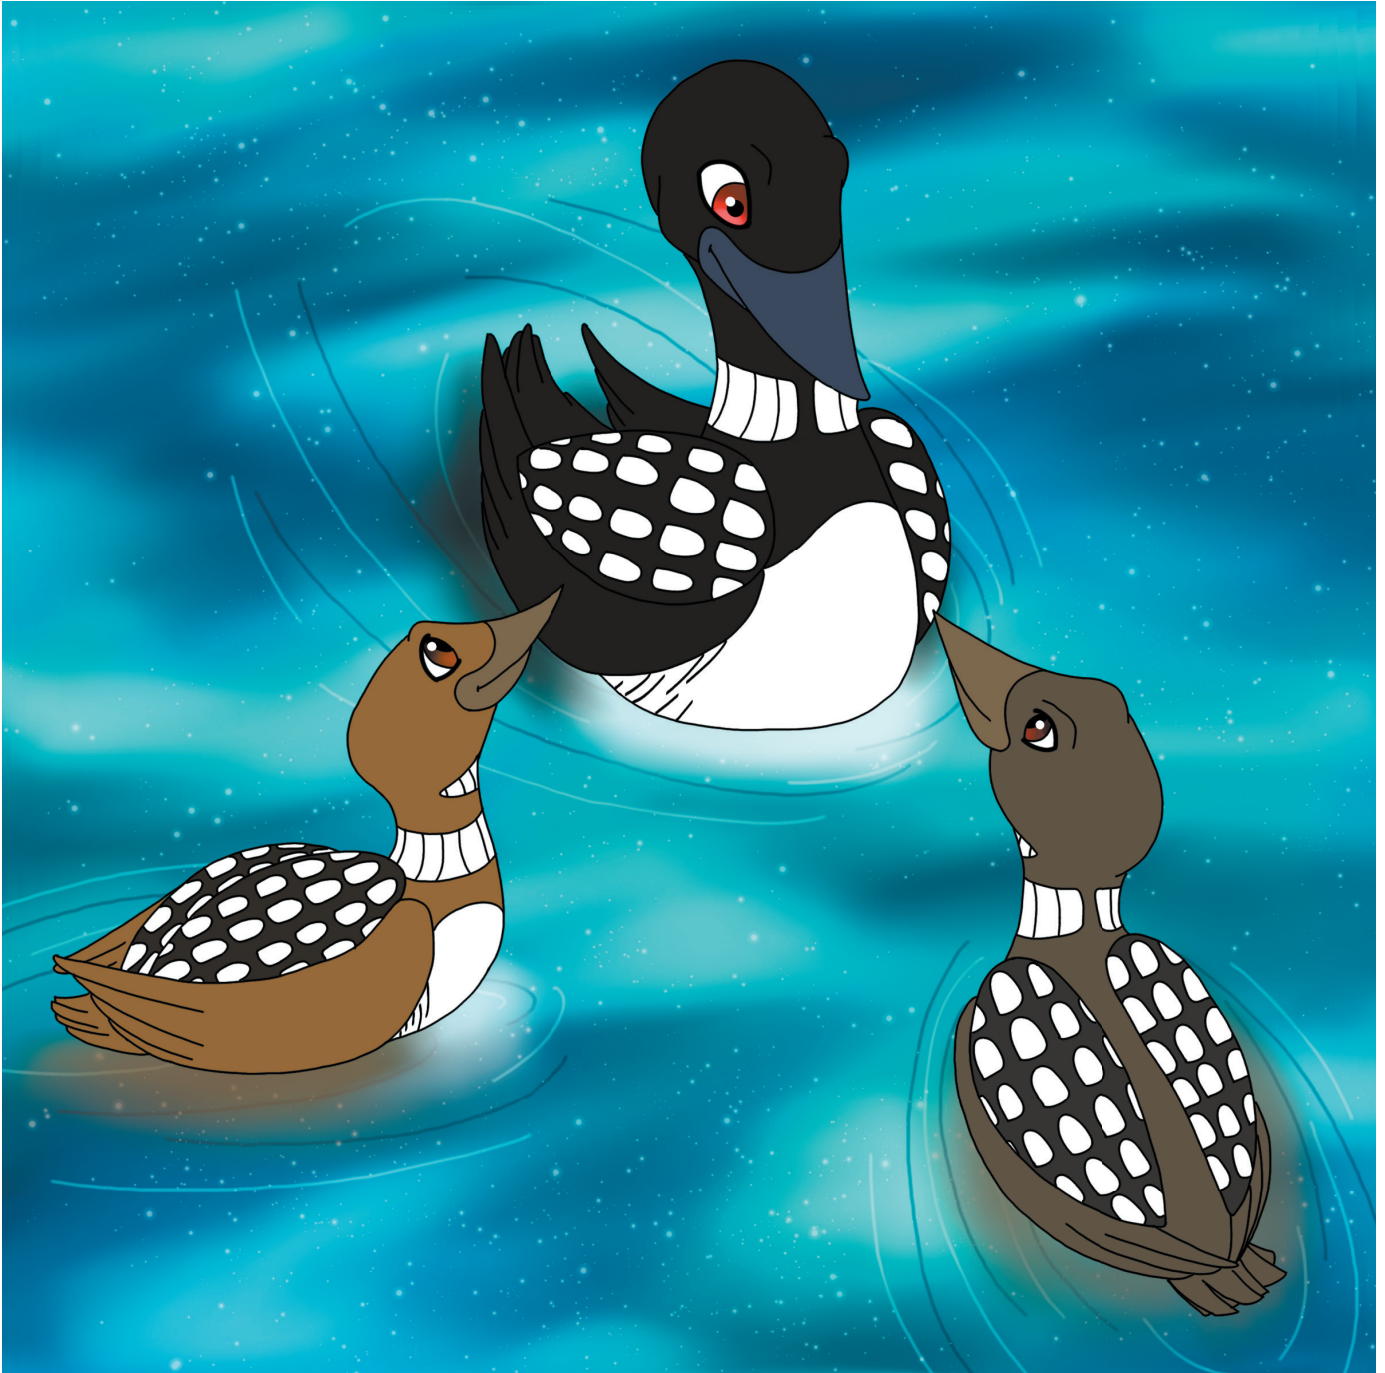

“Because our lake will soon be covered with ice, and we won't be able to dive for food.”

Use a QR Code Reader App to hear the Wail call.

Interesting Fact: Adult Loons begin their migration south several weeks before the young Loons.
